A Bright Woman,

Secretary of State Knox has paid a very high compliment to Miss Anne H. Shortridge, who is law clerk to Counsellor Hoyt in the State Department In his testimony before the House Committee on Appropriations, which is making up the State Department esti-mates, the Secretary said: "Miss Shortridge is an able lawyer. She began as a stenographer and general clerk and came into the Department of State three or four months ago. Many important briefs were prepared by her while she was in the Department of Justice. It is a great pleasure to me to be able to do per justice.'

Miss Shortridge's legal knowledge has been largely obtained in the course her daily work. When she was ap-pointed to a clerkship from the Second Congressional District of New York she was an expert stenographer, but pos-sessed no knowledge of the law. She soon showed remarkable aptitude for mastering legal facts, and became com-pletely fascinated with her work and enthusiastic over its possibilities.

An Inspiration for the Living the Department of Justice that she had It became evident to the officials of a veritable genius for the law, and they forts to add to her stock of knowledge. Before long Miss Shortridge began to be consulted as an authority on the legal work of the Department. Her transfer to the position she now occu-ples was regarded as a rare distinction

Miss Shortridge has never taken a course of law in any school, and her studies have been wholly self-directed. She is a native of Scotland, but came to this country when an infant. She is regarded not only as one of the ablest of Uncle Sam's woman employes, but also one of the best looking. She has regular features, blue eyes and a wealth of yellow hair, which is always modishly confured. Her frocks and hats are with myartificial far brums in my cars. I never feel them—they the extreme of smartness. She is fond on sees them. I will tell you the une story of How I Got Deaf-and who meet her.
